

THE PLAN – PART IV

This series began with the modest intentions of revealing, - in two or three parts, - the very real progress being made toward surrendering US sovereignty to a planned North American Union. In the writing however, it morphed, as it became apparent that it would be necessary to show the connectivity between cause and effect, - agent and outcome. It is not however, - as best as I understand it, - the purpose of this ministry to delve into the arcane inner-workings of conspiracy theory. There are others better equipped for that. Still, we must lift a little more of the veil to reveal the inner workings of the forces that are shaping this drive toward world government.

THE INEVITABLE WORLD GOVERNMENT

“For we do not wrestle against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this age, against spiritual hosts of wickedness in the heavenly places.” (Ephesians 6:12)

“[L]et us create regional continental units...the European Union, an American Union...and the five continents, if they're united, will create a World Union.” (Former UN Assistant Secretary General Robert Muller, 1997)¹

As if on cue, as this series proceeds, more information comes to light detailing the continued drive by the US, - not just toward a North American Union, - but extending that union to include integration with Europe. In April of 2007, President Bush and then EU President, German Chancellor Angela Merkel established something called the Transatlantic Economic Council. This working group has the open support of 6 US Senators and 49 Congressmen. Its aim is to work through a 7-year plan to create a Transatlantic Common Market joining the US & Europe by 2015. Yet there is hardly a peep out of the mainstream press, - and no serious discussion takes place. But we have seen that that is exactly how the proponents of One World Government like to work.

So the plan moves quietly ahead. Senator Robert Bennet, R-Utah, who chairs the congressional committee advising the working group, has advocated moving forward “in a very quiet way”, - bypassing Congress, - and thereby bypassing the scrutiny of public debate. Jerome Corsi, writing for World Net Daily reveals that according to official websites; - several “US government agencies are already at work integrating and harmonizing administrative rules and regulations with their EU counterparts”. The FDA, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the EPA, OSHA, and the Office of Management and Budget, are involved right now. (That's big stuff, but again there is hardly a word said on the matter.) What's interesting is that this process is following a 1939 plan that envisioned just such a Transatlantic Union as a stepping stone toward global government. Its modern implementation can be traced back to a 1995 decision by the Clinton administration to establish something called the New Transatlantic Agenda in alliance with the European Commission.² I know that's a lot of technical information for some, - but I just want to point out that this drive toward the Biblically prophesied One World Government, - has infiltrated even our own democratic-republican form of governance, - and is pervasive in extent and wide-ranging in scope. What's more, it has infected the thinking of so many in power, - who believe that this is but the natural, rational, and preferred order of the world to come. While some play the role of deceivers, - many are among the deceived and promote this agenda believing it to be the right course for the future of the world.

We've looked at before how this ethic of globalization, and even world government, - has taken on respectability in many of the political classes that espouse the Third Way politics of joining capitalist and socialist philosophies. This is seen as the way to peace and security. Mikhail Gorbachev has been a force toward this end ever since he was unceremoniously removed from office at the fall of the Soviet Union. The founding head of the American branch of the Gorbachev foundation, - Jim Garrison, - states that he believes America needs to begin acting like a "transnational empire" serving as a "midwife to a democratically governed global system...[until] its own power is subsumed by the very edifice it helps to build". He's calling for the US to commit hari kiri in order to advance the New World Order agenda. Looking at the evidence, it seems that the US is fast moving toward that very goal. [We will later see how the powers behind the 'Movement' have for generations been internationalists, eschewing patriotism and love of country in favor of an emerging global system which they are trying to both create and control.] Garrison admits that this process dates back to at least the days of President Wilson and his campaign for the League of Nations following WWI.³ By 1942, The studiously prestigious Brookings Institute was openly campaigning for "regional arrangements" as "stages in the evolution of a universal world order...or as something to be combined with a world-wide system".⁴ Carl Teichrib, who writes extensively on these matters points out that even the Marshall Plan which was the American attempt to build up Europe after the 2nd World War in order to save it from Communist takeover, had the underlying goal of the unification of Europe.

To the powers behind the thrones, it was all just part of the plan. The Elite had infiltrated the government agencies and think tanks that ran American and British policy to such an extent, that such ideas were just the natural corollaries of the most universal of goals. To the pawns of the Elite, it was Peace through global unification. To the Elite themselves, it was the pursuit of power and unbridled wealth through World Government, which they would control. They created or enlisted many movements along the way. Besides the class of political and economic one-worlders, they can count among their ranks radical environmentalists, New Agers, and those that seek to unite all the religions of the world under some sort of umbrella organization. And one of the chief tools in the drive toward taking control of the entire world is control of the currency. That tool is today being wielded by the international banking cartel that sits at the source of the 'Movement'.

It was just last year that the CFR periodical Foreign Affairs featured a cover article putting forth the case for currency restructuring with a piece entitled One World, Too Many Monies. Here's the 'money quote' from author Benn Steil: "Monetary nationalism is simply incompatible with globalization." His solution; - "abandon monetary nationalism" and abolish currencies.⁵ Former Federal Reserve head Paul Volcker put it even more succinctly: "A global economy requires a global currency".⁶ In fact, since shortly after WWII, the momentum toward just such a currency arrangement has been almost assumed by many of our most powerful financial institutions. VISA, for one, has admitted publicly that their entire strategic posture has been built on the need and inevitability of a global currency. Writing in 1998, one economist predicted that "the transition to a single currency for the entire world could come with a speed that might surprise many...[even] within a decade".⁷ That decade would be ending now; - and while we are not quite yet there, - we are certainly much farther down that road. The weakness of the American dollar and economy vis-à-vis the euro / Europe and the economic emergence of the yen / China challenge are bringing some sort of crisis ever closer. The "father of the euro" Robert Mundell, freely predicts that “International monetary reform” will come only as the result of “the threat of a global crisis”.⁸ That theme of ‘worldwide crisis’ serving the goal of global unity, is a common one among those seeking the New World Order.

Now like the drive for economic and political unification, one strategy in the movement for one world currency is the familiar incrementalism. In a research paper issued published in 1991, the Dallas branch of the Federal Reserve made the case for a North American currency that would replace the dollar and the peso. The Bank of Canada explored the same issue in a series of papers put out in the 90’s.⁹ So we have the strong performing euro of the EU, and the emerging specter of the North American amero. Other regions are following suit including: Southeast Asia, South America, Africa; - and even the Middle East, - under the auspices of the Gulf Cooperation Council. The GCC hopes to have a regional currency in place by 2010. The EU may be fulfilling its role as the Revived Roman Empire as it actively supports the formation of regional units around the world. These are all but steps. Morrison Bonpasse, President of the Single Global Currency Association lays out what he sees as the inevitable, soon-achievable goal; - “a Global Monetary Union, with a Global Central Bank an a single Global Currency”.¹⁰

So we see the world moving steadily toward a global currency. The dollars troubles and the weakening American economy, - with world resources and US economic power challenged by the emerging economies of China and India are preparing the way. Now combine that with the emerging RFID microchip technology to be placed in the hand or forehead, - implants that can hold all of a person’s medical information, protect from identity theft, track someone via GPS, and serve as debit and credit card while connected to the integrated global economy. Add to that a world system that is fast organizing itself along regional rather than national lines, - and powers behind the thrones that seek to unite these ten new regional blocs into a genuine world government and you have the recipe for the fulfillment of the Tribulation scenario laid out in Revelation 13. Christ there gave John a vision of the reign of Antichrist and the False Prophet. “Then I stood on the sand of the sea. And I saw a beast rising up out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, and on his horns ten crowns, and on his heads a blasphemous name. Now the beast which I saw was like a leopard, his feet were like the feet of a bear, and his mouth like the mouth of a lion. The dragon gave him his power, his throne, and great authority...And authority was given him over every tribe, tongue and nation.” (Revelation 13:1-2, 7) This describes the rise of the Antichrist. We earlier noted the ten sources of his power, but as Scripture points out, his real power comes from Satan himself. The leopard, bear and lion, - speak to the fact that his will be an empire that will combine the power, extent and characteristics of the world empires of history as described in Daniel.

A few verses later, John is speaking about the career of the False Prophet, who will head a One World Religion that will worship the Antichrist; - the False Messiah. He will enforce that worship with the sword, causing “as many as would not worship the image of the beast to be killed”. (Revelation 13:15) It is this Prophet that will organize all of mankind to submit to and worship the Beast. Total economic control will be one of his major means of power. “He causes all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and slave, to receive a mark on their right hand or on their foreheads, and that no one may buy or sell except one who has the mark or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.” (Revelation 13:16-17) The Bible tells us that economics, religion and politics will all be part of this coming world system. Our friend Robert Mundell agrees, stating in a 2003 lecture; “...a global single currency could not be achieved without a global government”.¹¹ That’s their goal. And even now, everything begins to fall into place.

HEATING THINGS UP

The plan is quite clear: Do whatever is necessary to bring about an Arab / Israeli peace. Give away the heart of Israel, if you must, - even half of Jerusalem, but get that worthless piece of paper signed. When viewed in this context, the confusing actions of the US & its Western Allies & even the Israeli government begin to make sense.

The US and Israel are determined to set up a Palestinian State. But they know that the Israeli public will not stomach a deal with Hamas, - the rulers in Gaza who are publicly committed to the destruction of the Jewish State. Daily, rockets from Gaza fly into Israel. The IDF targets the terror leaders and rocket squads quite successfully, yet the attacks continue. So the Israelis stop the flow of supplies to the Palestinians until the rocket attacks stop. This just sends the Europeans and the UN into a tizzy, laying demands on Israel to cooperate with the helpless Palestinian terrorists that are bombing them. So under pressure from the world, Israel relents and opens the way for fuel for the power plants, food and emergency medical supplies. Hamas shows its appreciation by raining 16 rockets down on Israel.¹² But its not just 'the bad terrorists' Hamas that is the problem. Fatah, the terror arm of Mahmoud Abbas, - the supposed moderates with which Israel is supposed to deal, has declared that it will continue its own rocket barrages against the Jews. Abbas receives millions in aid and military supplies from the US, the EU and elsewhere in the international community. Now the Israeli boycott has caused shortages that have led to unrest in Gaza, with thousands of women rampaging while trying to breakout across the border to Egypt. Egyptian troops responded with water cannon and eventually fire fights broke out between the two sides. The next day, Wednesday, Hamas forces, in cooperation, with Egyptian authorities, blew down the border fence in 15 areas. As many as 350,000 Palestinians were reported to have crossed the border in search of supplies. Not just food, but also massive amounts of weapons flowed across the border to the terrorists there.^{13 14 15}

Meanwhile, the Iranian front continues to heat up. Last week Prime Minister Olmert gave perhaps his clearest statement on the Iranian nuclear situation thus far, stating "Israel clearly will not reconcile itself to a nuclear Iran". He left the military option squarely on the table when it comes to dealing with Iranian nukes.¹⁶ The next day, Jerusalem made the warning more concrete by testing a ballistic missile; - and a few days later sending up a new spy satellite aimed at gathering intelligence from the region.^{17 18} Iran responded with an even more blatant threat of its own. An Iranian website warned that Israel would face a "wave of missile attacks" from Iran, Syria and Hezbollah.¹⁹ Perhaps ominously, Russia was conducting its own missile tests off the Atlantic coasts of Spain and France.²⁰ Russia had earlier declared that an attack on Iran would be considered an attack on Israel.

And then there is this, - from the pages of Arutz Sheva. Commentator Tamar Yonah discovered some interesting 'coincidences' that attended President Bush's trip to Israel last week. She points out that as the President was making his way to Jerusalem, seeking to divide that city between Jews and Palestinians, a wave of tornados, - (freakish weather for January), - struck the US. One in particular hit Jerusalem Arkansas, totally destroying one Mt Zion Community Church, while ripping through a place called Pope County. She goes on. When he arrives, Israel is experiencing an unusually heavy fog. The President travels to Ramallah in a 70-car motorcade. At the same time, Florida too is under heavy fog that causes an accident there involving...yes, 70 cars.²¹ Is this yet another example of God warning the US to desist from its plans to divide Israel, or is it just coincidence?
